A simplified shutter drive has piezo electric elements (3) which are made to bend progressively by the applied control signal. One end of each piezo element is clamped into a support (2). The free end is connected to one side of a coupling yoke (5), to which a second element is also connected. The coupling yoke is at the outer end of a drive lever (6) which connects to two shutter elements by a coupling yoke and two pivots. The piezo drive is controlled by a processor.

European Patent Application No. EP 0 950 918 A1

A camera (1) has a lens (2), two area detectors (3a, 3b) and a beam splitter (4) between those for splitting a luminous beam (5) towards the detectors. Each half of the beam appears on each detector. The two area detectors are exposed to different halves of an image or light beam.
